What You Do:

• Students are taught about famous visual artist Wassily Kandinsky and how he was also a talented musician.
• Students are shown a variety of Kandinsky’s work including Kandinsky’s circular color studies.
• Children explore concepts of color and how it relates to emotion. Examples: What emotion do you associate with red? (anger, embarrassment etc.) What emotions do you associate with blue? (sadness, loneliness, calm) What emotions do you associate with yellow? (happiness, contentment, warmth) etc.
• Children then fold a large sheet of paper into six squares.
• Students listen to a variety of music and create circular color studies (in each section) based on how the music makes them feel.
• When students complete their color studies they are put together to make a large piece of art. The results are quite stunning.
